CAMILLA HAGEN SORLI

ENSURING DIGNITY AND HEALTH FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS
BY IMPROVING SANITATION IN RURAL VIETNAM

Camilla is an active owner and project executive at Canica, one of the largest privately owned investment companies in Norway that works primarily in retail, fast moving consumer goods, real estate and manufacturing industries. She also manages the Canica Foundation, which enhances the impact of individuals, institutions, and organizations working to improve the lives of people worldwide.

Camilla grew up with a retail mentality and has been working for several years in the industry. Dealing daily with questions about customer behavior, relations and needs, Camilla is a firm believer in thinking from an end-user's perspective and applying this to Canica's philanthropic projects. She holds several board positions, serves as the chairman of two companies, and was recently nominated as the Chair of The Global Campaign Ambassador Group of SOS Children's Villages. She is a graduate from Kings College London and the University of Oslo, with studies in literature, pedagogy, social economics and business. Camilla and her husband Daniel Sorli, a medical doctor, live in Oslo, Norway with their three children.
